

Yoga Scotland Teacher Training Missed Class Policy

4th March 2022

The importance of attending every class for Teacher Training to gain full understanding of all aspects is essential so this policy sets out details of this.

We know and understand that life can happen and things can sometimes change, but we would like to emphasise the importance of full attendance in order to pass the course.

Therefore, Yoga Scotland will allow up to a maximum of 2 missed weekends per 1 year of the Teacher Training course. The student is responsible for catching up with a class or sessions missed in the following way:

1. The student will watch recordings of the missed session/s.
2. Then complete the worksheets provided by the tutor.
3. A 30-minute video/audio call with the tutor to discuss the missed session and the worksheets will be arranged.
4. The student will be invoiced by Yoga Scotland £40 per day/session to cover the additional and approved cost incurred by the tutor and YS to cover materials and meeting/s in order to complete tasks that meet the course needs and/or qualification requirement.

If another weekend is missed (reaching the 2 maximum) the student, the tutor/s and the administration team will discuss next stages and/or further options as this could impact assessment and passing the course. Student evidence to meet course assessment requirements to gain the qualification is at the tutor's discretion.

YS do not offer refunds in this instance but deferment to the following year's course is a possibility and can be discussed with a tutor or member of the Admin Team.
